Message from the Director of Public Prosecutions

I am pleased to present the 2018–2019 Departmental Plan for the Public Prosecution Service of Canada (PPSC).

The PPSC’s mandate is to prosecute offences under federal jurisdiction, and to provide high-quality legal advice to law enforcement agencies. The plan describes how the PPSC will ensure that it meets that mandate throughout the year and identifies the human and financial resources necessary to make that possible.

The results associated with this mandate are set out in this plan, along with indicators to enable us to track our success. Throughout the year, the PPSC will continue to ensure that timely and comprehensive legal advice is provided to investigative agencies, that federal prosecutions are completed in a timely manner, and that through professionally conducted prosecution-related work, the PPSC contributes to the administration of justice.

The PPSC has identified four new corporate priorities for 2018–2019, in support of its mandate. In the coming year, the PPSC will take steps to:

- grow our talent for the future;
- modernize the legal case management system and tools to support timely prosecutions;
- foster a healthy and respectful workplace; and
- enhance communications and opportunities for employee engagement.

In pursuing these priorities, as in all of our work, PPSC employees are guided by our key values of respect, integrity, excellence, and leadership.

Kathleen Roussel
Director of Public Prosecutions

Message from the Commissioner of Canada Elections

I am pleased to present the 2018-2019 Departmental Plan for the Office of the Commissioner of Canada Elections (OCCE).

The overarching priority for the OCCE is, at all times, to ensure that we deliver on our mandate. The activities outlined in this plan are designed to ensure that we continue to meet the responsibilities conferred on our office by the Canada Elections Act and the Referendum Act, and that we do so in a way that ensures we are accountable to Canadians while maintaining the independence of our organization.

Preparations for the 43rd general election—scheduled for October 21st, 2019—will begin this fiscal year. This is essential to ensuring that we are well-positioned to address and respond to the wide variety of complaints received in relation to an election period. Furthermore, it allows us to identify potential risks that could have an impact on the office’s compliance and enforcement mandate. This is particularly important in today’s digital environment, where technology is playing an ever-increasing and evolving part in electoral processes, including the electoral debate itself. The use of social media, both by political actors and the general public, is expected to play a much more significant role in the 2019 general election. We have identified it as raising considerable investigative challenges going forward.

In addition, the OCCE has recognized that social media is also responsible for a fundamental shift in the way Canadians send and receive information. As a result, in 2018-2019, the OCCE will be increasing its presence in the digital space by creating its own social media accounts. This will serve the dual purposes of helping the OCCE reach a broader audience while also creating a distinct brand for the organization that underscores its independence from both the PPSC and Elections Canada.

Over the last several years, some of the complaints we have received have become more complex and have often required sustained investigative effort, sometimes over the course of several years. Evolving means of communications also increasingly require staff with specialized expertise, particularly as it relates to the use of social media and new technologies. In order to address these issues, the OCCE must have trained, in-house, indeterminate staff with expertise to quickly address and investigate allegations arising out of this new environment, and to support investigators in doing so. To that end, the OCCE will be seeking an increase to its appropriation in the 2018-2019 fiscal year that would allow us to convert some positions currently held by term employees and contractors to indeterminate positions.

Yves Côté, Q.C.
Commissioner of Canada Elections

Plans at a glance

Public Prosecution Service of Canada

Grow our Talent for the Future

Broad demographic and rapid technological changes are redefining the nature of work and the workplace. To maintain its capacity to prosecute criminal and regulatory offences under federal law and provide prosecutorial legal advice to investigative agencies, the PPSC will act proactively and strategically to access and grow the talent it needs now and in the future. To attract this talent, the PPSC will nurture a strong brand and increase its reach to diverse sources of potential recruits and talent at all levels through outreach and innovative hiring practices. Additionally, the PPSC will review its existing talent management and development systems and practices to maximize each employee's contribution and potential. Focussing on future skills such as collaboration, interdisciplinary practice, data literacy, project management, and technological savviness, while maintaining unparalleled legal knowledge and competencies will ensure quality, responsiveness and timeliness in delivering the PPSC's mandate.

Modernize the Legal Case Management System and Tool

Since its inception in 2006, the PPSC has relied on a legal case management system, iCase, owned and operated by the Department of Justice (DoJ), to support the delivery of quality prosecutorial and advisory services. As iCase has reached the end of its lifecycle, there is a present need to replace it with a more modern system with greater capabilities. Consequently, the DoJ launched a project in 2014-15, to develop a new legal case management system. Once this new system is implemented, the department will look to decommission and cease to support the current system. As iCase is dated and no longer meets the PPSC's data entry and reporting requirements, the PPSC has initiated a project to customize the legal case management system developed by the DoJ to align with the PPSC's strategic objectives and support the delivery of quality prosecution services. The PPSC will enable its business by implementing a legal case management and timekeeping system that will provide a dynamic and tech-savvy environment to empower a confident and high-performing workforce that embraces new ways of working.

In parallel, the PPSC has launched an initiative to implement enterprise GCDOCS for both records and document management. The PPSC implementation of enterprise GCDOCS will be integrated with its new legal case management system to ensure appropriate controls and minimal duplication of effort.

Fostering a Healthy and Respectful Workplace

The PPSC will continue to focus its efforts on maintaining a respectful workplace and supporting the mental health and well-being of all employees in the delivery of its mandate. The PPSC will continue to consult employees and act on the results of the Public Service Employee Surveys to improve the workplace. Under the Federal Public Service Workplace Mental Health Strategy, the PPSC, with its bargaining agents, established a Joint Mental Health and Wellness Steering Committee to lead the way in identifying our priority areas of focus and leading national efforts on mental health policy and practice in the organization. These efforts to change the culture and increase capacity and awareness require the attention and commitment from all employees and the PPSC is committed to creating meaningful dialogue and progress in these areas. A healthy workplace means healthier, happier and more productive employees working for Canadians.

Enhancing Communication and Opportunities for Employee Engagement

Effective communications, both internal and external, are essential to any high-performing organization. Externally, the PPSC plans to increase public awareness of the department and its role in the criminal justice system with key stakeholder groups. This increased awareness will not only support public confidence in the administration of justice; it will also ensure that potential employees are aware of the PPSC as a potential employer, thereby supporting the department's recruitment efforts. Internally, the PPSC will work to increase employee engagement in its planning process, and to solidify employees' sense of belonging to a national organization.

Moreover, the PPSC will be implementing an organisation-wide branding strategy by applying a coherent PPSC brand to all of the organization's corporate messaging and communication vehicles such as its Web site and recruitment notices. The PPSC will also develop a departmental communications strategy, to support information sharing both internally and externally, and to ensure a consistent approach to communications across the organization. Internally, the PPSC will focus on refining and modernizing its communications tools, notably reviewing the content of the departmental intranet site and taking steps to update and improve its structure and presentation. Additionally, the PPSC will make employee engagement and consultation a key principle for knowledge sharing and decision-making, ensuring that diverse voices across the department are considered and integrated in the ongoing improvements of prosecution services.

Office of the Commissioner of Canada Elections

Compliance and Enforcement of the Canada Elections Act

In 2018-19, the OCCE will maintain its focus on efforts to address complaints and ongoing investigations. In particular, the OCCE will work to complete, wherever possible, the investigation of complaints received by the Office in relation to the 2015 general election. OCCE personnel will also continue to review referrals of political financing matters from Elections Canada in relation to the ongoing reporting requirements of registered parties and associations, and those in relation to the 42nd general election and subsequent by-elections.

Legislative Changes to the Canada Elections Act

In the coming fiscal year, the OCCE will monitor parliamentary proceedings that may have implications with respect to the compliance and enforcement regime. The Office is also committed to providing Parliament with any assistance it may request as it considers changes to the Canada Elections Act, including legislative changes that would move the OCCE back to Elections Canada.

It should be noted that the timely adoption of new legislation affecting the Commissioner's compliance and enforcement mandate is essential to ensuring the OCCE has adequate time to implement all new measures prior to the 2019 general election, without imposing a strain on the Office's ability to prepare for that general election.

The legislative changes and the OCCE's associated activities are aligned with the Prime Minister's directive to the Minister of Democratic Institutions to make the OCCE more independent from government as set out in her mandate letter.

Preparations for the 43rd General Election

The OCCE will also begin preparations for the 2019 general election. Throughout 2018-2019, the Office will work with its counterparts at Elections Canada, the Public Prosecution Service of Canada and the CRTC to review existing practices and procedures to facilitate the secure transfer of information between the organizations, as required. In the coming fiscal year, the OCCE will complete the modernization of its complaint form, with a view to ensuring a seamless and coordinated approach to its investigations.

For more information on the PPSC's and OCCE's plans, priorities and planned results, see the "Planned results" section of this report.

Planned results: what we want to achieve this year and beyond

Core Responsibilities

Prosecution Services

Description

The PPSC prosecutes criminal and regulatory offences under federal law in an independent, impartial and fair manner. It also provides prosecutorial legal advice to investigative agencies.

Planning highlights

Given the nature, volume and complexity of criminal prosecutions, the PPSC is required to assess and manage its prosecutorial resources on an ongoing basis. In 2018-19, the organization will continue to focus on improving its prosecution management practices, from the way files are assigned to how they are managed and tracked throughout the lifecycle of a prosecution. It will also continue to identify and learn from best practices and recommendations developed by its partners, including provincial and international prosecution services.

In addition, the PPSC is committed to strengthening its relationships with investigative agencies through effective communication at both the local and international levels. While recognizing the independent roles of investigators and prosecutors, collaboration will continue to underpin these relationships at the investigative and prosecution stages. The PPSC will continue to promote the PPSC Service Standards, ensuring that investigators receive advice that is timely, consistent, complete and promotes respect for the rule of law. Furthermore, the PPSC will be conducting a Survey of Investigative Agencies which will allow the organization to assess the timeliness and comprehensiveness of legal advice provided to investigative agencies.

As the decision regarding who to investigate resides exclusively with investigators, effective and ongoing communications regarding investigative and enforcement priorities, including upcoming investigations, will continue to assist the PPSC in predicting demands for prosecutorial services. At the individual file level, the PPSC will continue to work with investigators to enhance the use of the Report to Crown Counsel and assist in fulfilling the Crown's constitutional obligations to provide timely disclosure of the prosecution case to the accused. On a more general level, the PPSC will work with investigative agencies to develop training programs for investigators that provide operational support so that investigators and prosecutors are able to address current and emerging trends in criminal and constitutional law, including those arising from the ongoing evolution of investigative tools and techniques.

Furthermore, the PPSC has developed a Jordan Dates Tracking Report to provide information regarding active litigation files with Jordan Deadline Dates by Court level. The report identifies the number of files that are at risk of going over the 18 month or 30 month presumptive ceiling set by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Jordan for the timely completion of prosecutions. Beginning in fiscal 2018-19, the report will be generated on a quarterly basis and distributed to the regions for implementation.

Lastly, the PPSC will continue to provide its prosecutors with access to both the learning tools and opportunities necessary to improve their skills, further their professional development, and tackle the complex challenges of today's prosecutions and operational requirements. The provision of targeted legal training to prosecutors will ensure that they meet the requirements set by provincial and territorial bar associations.

Electoral Compliance and Enforcement

Description

Compliance and Enforcement activities under the Canada Elections Act and the Referendum Act are conducted by the OCCE in an independent, impartial and fair manner.

Planning highlights

In 2018-19, the Commissioner of Canada Elections will continue to ensure compliance with the Canada Elections Act through the application of administrative measures. These measures are generally used for less serious breaches including some cases of inadvertent non-compliance. These include informal means, such as the issuance of information or caution letters, through which the individuals or entities involved are informed of the potential consequences of their actions and are put on notice that the Commissioner now expects them to act in accordance with the requirements of the Act since they have been duly advised. It also includes formal means of ensuring compliance, such as entering into a compliance agreement with the person or entity, under the terms and conditions that the Commissioner considers necessary to ensure compliance with the Act. Under the Canada Elections Act, the Commissioner ensures enforcement of the Act by making referrals to the Director of Public Prosecutions with a recommendation that charges be laid.

Internal Services

Description

Internal Services are those groups of related activities and resources that the federal government considers to be services in support of programs and/or required to meet corporate obligations of an organization. Internal Services refers to the activities and resources of the 10 distinct service categories that support Program delivery in the organization, regardless of the Internal Services delivery model in a department. The 10 service categories are: Management and Oversight Services; Communications Services; Legal Services; Human Resources Management Services; Financial Management Services; Information Management Services; Information Technology Services; Real Property Services; Materiel Services; and Acquisition Services.

Planning highlights

The PPSC is working towards achieving efficiencies and greater integration through the ongoing reorganization of its Internal Services. Communications, Agent Affairs, Administrative Services, Corporate Planning and External Relations, and the legal case management system project group now report to the Director General of Corporate Services.

The PPSC will continue to innovate in developing and implementing a customized, prosecution specific, legal case management system to meet the needs of the organization. The goal of this legal case management system project is to provide a robust and agile system that will enable the PPSC to benefit from the effective management of prosecution case files and timekeeping information, foster a digital work environment, and leverage technology as part of a transformation for better business outcomes. Reflecting the data independence of the prosecution function, the proposed system will keep the PPSC's data separate from that of the DoJ, allowing it to meet the PPSC's specific needs. This year, the PPSC will focus on the ongoing system development and necessary steps to prepare for a successful data migration.

The objective of the National Fine Recovery Program is to enforce sentences by recovering outstanding federal fines ordered against individuals and companies convicted under federal statutes. Federal fines refer to fines levied after a conviction in a court of law for an offence prosecuted by the federal Crown. The PPSC will continue to experiment with its fine recovery model with the ongoing outsourcing of parts of the collection process to a private collection agency. Previously done internally, this non-traditional service delivery option will be the subject of a neutral evaluation to assess whether the new Fine Recovery Program has resulted in increased efficiencies in fine recovery.

Finally, while the PPSC does consider GBA implications, including gender- and EE-based impacts on its operations, given the scope of the PPSC's role and mandate, the PPSC does not have the resources or capacity to conduct formal GBA+.

Gender-based Analysis Plus (GBA+)

An analytical process used to help identify the potential impacts of policies, programs and services on diverse groups of women, men and gender-diverse people. The “plus” acknowledges that GBA goes beyond sex and gender differences to consider multiple identity factors that intersect to make people who they are (such as race, ethnicity, religion, age, and mental or physical disability).

government-wide priorities (priorités pangouvernementales)

For the purpose of the 2018–19 Departmental Plan, government-wide priorities refers to those high-level themes outlining the government’s agenda in the 2015 Speech from the Throne, namely: Growth for the Middle Class; Open and Transparent Government; A Clean Environment and a Strong Economy; Diversity is Canada's Strength; and Security and Opportunity.

planned spending (dépenses prévues)

For Departmental Plans and Departmental Results Reports, planned spending refers to those amounts presented in the Main Estimates.

The determination of planned spending is a departmental responsibility, and departments must be able to defend the expenditure and accrual numbers presented in their Departmental Plans and Departmental Results Reports.
